

IPL 2025: GT vs RR Weather And Pitch Report Of Narendra Modi Stadium, Ahmedabad – Match 23

As we approach Match 23 of the IPL 2025 season, the Gujarat Titans (GT) are all set to face the Rajasthan Royals (RR) at their fortress—the Narendra Modi Stadium in Ahmedabad. This venue, the largest cricket stadium in the world, has become synonymous with high-octane T20 clashes. With both teams featuring explosive line-ups and match-winners in every department, the weather and pitch conditions could play a big role in deciding which side walks away with the two crucial points.

Let's break down what players and fans can expect from the skies above and the pitch beneath in this much-anticipated encounter.

Weather Forecast: A Hot, Dry Evening Under Lights

Ahmedabad in April is known for its dry heat, and match day is expected to be no different. The temperatures during the day are likely to hover around the 38 to 40°C mark. By the time the game begins in the evening, it should cool down slightly to a more manageable 30°C. There's little to no chance of rain, so fans can look forward to a full game without any weather interruptions.

Humidity is expected to stay low, around 20 to 25 percent, which means the ball is unlikely to swing much in the air. However, dew might make a surprise appearance in the second innings.

Captains will keep a close eye on the conditions during the toss, as chasing might become easier under the lights if the outfield gets slippery.

Read More: IPL RR vs KKR Dream11 Prediction

In short, it's going to be a dry, hot, and fast-paced evening perfect for T20 fireworks.

Pitch Report: A Batting Paradise with a Twist

The pitch at the Narendra Modi Stadium has historically been a batsman's best friend—especially in the IPL. Expect another hard, flat surface with good bounce, which allows the ball to come on nicely to the bat. This makes strokeplay easier and encourages teams to go big right from the powerplay.

That said, this pitch is not just a highway for runs. Over the last couple of seasons, a subtle pattern has emerged. While the pitch starts out favoring the batters, it tends to slow down as the game progresses, especially in day-night games. This means spinners and slower bowlers will play a crucial role in the middle overs. Expect bowlers like Rashid Khan for GT and Yuzvendra Chahal for RR to be vital in this phase of the game.

Fast bowlers who can mix up their pace and bowl into the pitch might also find some joy in the latter part of the innings. Yorkers and slower bouncers are likely to be effective, especially at the death.

Tactical Implications: Toss Could Be Crucial

Given the pitch's nature and the potential for dew, the toss will be an important factor. Teams may look to bowl first, taking advantage of a slightly fresher surface early on and hoping to chase down a target with the ball skidding under the lights. However, if the pitch looks dry enough to slow down quickly, the captain winning the toss might choose to bat first and post a big total.

Power hitters from both teams—think Jos Buttler, Shubman Gill, Sanju Samson, and David Miller—will be licking their lips at the prospect of a true surface that rewards clean hitting.

Final Thoughts

The setting is just right for a classic IPL clash: a batting-friendly pitch with a slight twist, warm weather conditions, and two teams packed with explosive talent. While both Gujarat Titans and Rajasthan Royals will come into this match with plenty of belief, it could come down to which side adapts better to the conditions as the match progresses.

One thing is certain—fans at the Narendra Modi Stadium, and those watching from around the world, are in for an evening of thrilling T20 cricket.

Read More: IPL SRH vs LSG Dream11 Prediction